

Appendix B — Final Interview

Hi Kaasvi, I think I have finished making the game. From the discussions we had, I had made a success criteria for myself of things I thought would be essential to making the game the way you had hoped it to be.

Great! Lets have a look at the game then.

(demo of the application)

So this is the login screen. You had said that you wanted to have a game with just your friends, and that is what the private game mode is for. The random game is for anytime when you don't have other people to play with but you still want to play. I also decided to give the users the choice of adding words to the game as it allows user input to development of the game.

I will now show you the private game. When you enter, you get to choose between 2 options, creating the game or joining a game that has already been created. If you create a game, as you can see here, the game gives you a gamepin that you can share with yours friends so that everybody can join the game. If you decide to join a game, you just have to enter that game pin.

That sounds good, but what happens if someone enters the wrong pin? Will the app crash?

That's a good question. The application will not crash, but will just give an error saying they game with this pin does not exist and will allow them to try again.

(Continuing with the demo) Once you are in a game, you have to enter your username. Like you had wanted in the last interview, two people cannot have the same username and if this is attempted, the player to try and user that name second will get an error.

(End of demo)

So what do you think?

Well, I like the functionality of the app and it does everything I wanted it to. I like the way you have laid out the application with the initial section then it getting more specific. I also like all the different colours you can make on the board.

There are a few things I think you could improve for the future as well though.

1. You should try and implement a hinting system so that it tells the guesser if they are close to the word or not. I think it will just make it more realistic
2. Maybe allow people to choose their team in a private game because players might want to be with a particular friend.

50 Other than that I like the way the program has turned out!
